Dear Parents/Caregivers,

Our Stage 1 children are very busy studying the unit 'Up, Down and All Around' in science. Our children are exploring natural, man-made and managed features. Through observations and photographic records, students are investigating daily, weekly, and seasonal changes in our local environment. To complement this unit, we have organised a very exciting incursion. The children will be involved in experimenting with air and water movements; and even erupt their own flurry of snow! This will help deepen our children's understanding of the weather and the unit of work.

The Mad about Science incursion is a series of science experiments about the weather.

Learning Areas

- The program meets Education syllabus outcomes in the Science and English syllabuses.
